Picture a cozy, colorful café in Italy – a place where locals go and tourists feel lucky to find. Inside Fiore's, a feeling of warmth rushes over you, as you are greeted by friendly faces and the aromas of authentic Italian family recipes.

Everything is made from scratch at this moderately-priced restaurant – from the fresh mozzarella and focaccia bread to the sauces and desserts, with plenty of vegan, vegetarian and gluten-free options and local/seasonal ingredients, says owner/chef Anthony Cerrato. Each dish is made to order and it feels like home, because you can get what you like.

The restaurant's name and motif – a bull with a flower – honor Cerrato's father and grandfather, Fiore, whose recipe for hot and sweet Italian sausage is on the menu, as is a decadent ninth generation Cerrato tiramisu.

Full-service, customized catering is also a house specialty, for parties of 10 to 300+.

Open Thanksgiving Day, Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve/Day.
"Night of the Seven Fish," Italian Christmas Eve tradition, $35/person, $60/couple.

The cleverly designed space inspires a romantic dinner for two or a relaxed meal with friends. Overlooking the main floor is a quaint, upstairs balcony with seating, which can also be reserved for groups and special occasions.

Grilled spinach ravioli with roma tomatoes and shrimp in a sherry cream sauce on fresh baby arugula with a balsamic reduction.

The recently remodeled storefront of Fiore's beckons, but it's the scent of fresh Italian cooking that quickly draws you in. Downstairs is the recently revamped Fred's Parkside Pub & Grill, owned by Cerrato's father, Fred, with its own kitchen and additional space for private parties.
